

Most of these are “books that form” rather than books about “formation” Some of them teach us specific practices and disciplines that can help us to open up and make space for God. All of them provide us with good food for reflection and conversation with God. As you read, take time to stop and pay attention to what stirs in your heart. (This is the place of formation) Talk with God about what you have read and about what you are experiencing. Also, take time to talk with others who can help you to process and to pay attention to the presence, work and word of God in your life as you read.
